Forecast For Northwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Tuesday 02 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Mainly rain showers tonight.

This Evening and Tonight:
Bands of heavy showers pushing across the region this evening and overnight. These may give some snow or freezing rain over high ground, but will turn increasingly to rain, allowing lying snow to thaw, bringing a risk of localised flooding. Minimum temperature 3 deg C (37 deg F).

Wednesday:
Persistent rain throughout the day north, turning to snow over the Pennines and Fells, with drier weather in the south. Showers in the south arrive later in the day. Maximum temperature 8 deg C (46 deg F).

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Thursday will see a mixture of rain and hill snow. Unsettled weather continues on Friday and Saturday with showery conditions, these turning to snow over the hills. Feeling cold throughout.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.